

Early Glass Technology Research Network (UCL), Department of Scientific Research (The British Museum) and The Association for the History of Glass
Summer Study Seminar

World Conservation and Exhibition Centre, The British Museum
Wednesday 15 May 2019

Timetable

[09:00 The British Museum opens]

10:15 Meet at the Information Desk, Great Court, The British Museum (you must be at the information desk at this time, it will not be possible to gain entry to the seminar venue after 10:15)

Coffee and tea – Teapoint, Level B01 (WCEC)

11:00 Morning lecture session – The Atrium, Level B01 (WCEC)

Chair: Daniela Rosenow

11:00-11:25 Martine Newby Haspeslagh – Ancient Glass, a Kaleidoscope of Colour

11:25-11:50 Paul Nicholson- "School of Rock? Glass and faience as coloured stones"

11:50-12:15 Sally Cottam - The colour 'colourless'

12:15-12:40 Peter Cosyns - "Things are not always what they seem. A quest for truth"

12:40 Lunch (not provided, there are many cafes and restaurants within the Museum and in the surrounding area)

14:00 Meet at the Information Desk, Great Court, The British Museum (you must be at the information desk at this time, it will not be possible to gain entry to the seminar venue after 14:00)

14:15 Afternoon lecture session – The Atrium, Level B01 (WCEC)

Chair: James Peake

14:15-14:40 Andrew Shortland – “Yellow glass, antimony and gold: links between metalworking and vitreous materials from the Late Bronze Age onwards”

14:40-15:05 Veronica Occari - “Scientific investigation of modern coloured Venetian glass beads”

15:05-15:30 Ana Franjic – “Iron Age beads from Croatia”

15:30-15:55 Laura Adlington – “Handheld pXRF for analysis of Umayyad mosaic tesserae - Preliminary results”

15:55-16:10 Justine Bayley – “Enamels are also coloured glass”

16:10-16:25 Discussion and closing comments

16:25 Lecture session closes

Suggested venue for post-seminar drinks: Truckles, Bury Pl, Bloomsbury, London WC1A 2JR, UK

Speakers have 20 minutes to present their talk.

5 minutes are allocated to each talk for questions.

Free WiFi: Select 'British Museum WiFi' and provide your details.

For further questions please contact: Daniela.rosenow@dainst.de